DEVIL - GOAT RALLY TONIGHT

Dance Team At Final Lyceum

The fifth in the series of Lyceum programs offered for students, faculty, and townspeople, presented last Tuesday evening in Washington Hall auditorium Miriam Winslow and Foster Fitz-Simons, dance partners.

Miss Winslow and Mr. Fitz-Simons, both of whom are well-known in this country and abroad, rendered a program of twelve dances, varied and broad in scope, and designed primarily to demonstrate the inextricable relationship that is possible between great music and dances designed to interpret it. As partners, Miss Winslow and Mr. Fitz-Simons showed the strong union which results from both masculine and feminine contributions to the dance. In their individual work they deserved marked commendation for their freedom of movement, skillful balance, agility, remarkable ease, and their fine coordination of rhythm, emotion, and clear expression.

The purpose of each dance was to disclose the mood and picture of various musical compositions, the first of which was a Gigue of Bach and which with regard to both mood and steps served as an introduction or prologue to the work of the evening. This number was presented by both dancers and was followed by a solo dance of Miss Winslow's entitled Burlesque of Rievier, a charming yet somewhat grotesque bit of dancing colored even more by the gay ballet costume of the dancer. It was burlesque cleverly executed.

The number which followed was of an entirely different nature, and Mr. Fitz-Simons readily lent himself to the role of Satie's Archangel Michael, the Watcher. With dark stage and the spotlight playing upon his dazzling white costume, Mr. Fitz-Simons presented an unforgettable picture produced almost wholly by limited steps and bodily motions of ease, grace, and dignity. In direct contrast to this solo was the brilliant, clownish dance, offered by the two dancers, and entitled for the Very Young Morse with percussion instruments. Retsof's Archaisms, done by the pair, was largely a work of rhythm.

Guion's Chrome, again more of a comic dance, was so cleverly executed by the dancers that they were induced to repeat it, for the audience appreciated the dramatic action as well as the poise and balance portrayed in the number. Miss Winslow was again the actress in her picture of Tansman's Frail Woman in which she illustrated by apt gestures, glances, and steps the character of the frail woman—gossipy, selfish, sentimental, and bossy. Mr. Fitz-

Varsity Team Named

Thursday night after the Devil-Goat basketball game, the Mary Washington varsity basketball team was selected by a group headed by Dr. Caroline B. Sinclair, and including the Athletic Association manager of basketball and the class managers.

Jo Inskeep, manager of basketball, said, "We found it quite difficult to choose the girls for the team as we had such a list of good material."

The varsity team will meet the Alumnae team Saturday night, March 2, in a game that will be the feature of Alumnae week end on the campus.

The following girls were chosen for the varsity team:

Jane Adams
Jane Beeton
Becky Buckingham
Lavinia Ellett
Dot Felt
Marguerite Fortmann
Jo Inskeep
Charlotte Morgan
Jean Plyler
Ann Pekich
Ann Smith
Peggy Thompson
Nancy Lee Wilkerson
The captain will be elected later.

Simons was again master of agility and dramatic expression as exhibited by the dance in his interpretation of Respighi's Lucifer, the Fallen. Miss Winslow truly rendered a superb characterization of the Bach Magnificat. Here the dim blue of her gown under the pale light combined with her varying moods of passion and play to produce the outstanding picture of the evening.

The program concluded with the partners presenting scenes from Campbell's Landscape with Figures, which consisted of a fascinating group of rhythmic expressions with a strong dramatic declaration in conclusion. The dancers were assisted by Mary Campbell at the piano and Mary Stenrus Morse with percussion instruments.

The Lyceum series of 1940 has brought to us during the winter five excellent programs. The first of these, at which Washington Hall was inaugurated, presented the National Symphony Orchestra under Hans Kindler, with the performance of the Beethoven Fifth Symphony as the highlight. Following this came an evening of dramatic sketches by Helen Howe, and then the performance of the charming play of old New England "Run Pedlar Run." On February 16th we heard a program of chamber music with Sylvia Meyer, harpist, Ralph Hersh, violin and viola, and William Brennan, violoncello. Last Tuesday's program of the dancers, Miss Winslow and Foster Fitz-Simons, concluded the current series of the Mary Washington Entertainment Association.

Mr. Darter Honored By Conference

Mr. Oscar H. Darter of our faculty has just received an invitation from Dr. Keener Frazier, of North Carolina University, to become a member of the Conference on International Interest of the South to be held in Nashville, Tenn., on March 28 and 29.

The theme of the conference is to be "The South and World Affairs." Its projects will be to map out a program to follow in regard to this aspect, and to further the three objectives of (1) the organization of a world peace, (2) the South in relation to the trade agreements program, and (3) the cooperation of the U. S. with Latin America.

Mr. Darter will serve on the committee concerned with the Agenda—Cooperation with Latin America. The committee's work will be to outline the items relating to this subject in a form ready to be used in further conferences and college course. Mr. Darter's associates on the committee will be President John Tigers of the University of Florida and Dean Pierson of the University of North Carolina.

Dr. Frazier, who extended the invitation to Mr. Darter, is editor of the bulletin called "The South and World Affairs," and is now serving as Executive Secretary of the Southern Council on International Relations. He will act as Mr. Darter's world Affairs class on Thursday night.

Mr. Darter, who is an advisor for our International Relations Club, and vitally interested in all phases of diplomacy, has been sent as a delegate to similar conferences before, but he states that this will be "a new effort to emphasize the relations of the South to World Affairs."

Battlefield Sponsors New Type Contest

Under the auspices of The Battlefield, a student body election was held recently to determine the seven girls on the campus who typified best seven definite qualities. These qualifications were chosen as being those that would give a cross sectional view of student life. In previous years, the Battlefield has sponsored the voting for the six outstanding girls on the campus; it is felt, however, that this new method will give more girls a chance for recognition. The results of the contest will not be announced at present, but will appear in the annual when it is released in May.

The ballots included the following positions:

1. The most poised girl.
2. The best groomed girl.
3. The prettiest girl.
4. The most cooperative girl.
5. The most scholarly girl: she who has a knowledge of her

Goats Defeat Devils In Close Game

Last night in the gym the Goats defeated the Devils 25-19 amidst a crowd exhibiting enough spirit to spur any ardent basketball fan on. The gym fairly rocked with the cheers and spirited yells of the excited student body around the balcony; all eyes on the court below which was the scene of excellent sportsmanship and hard play.

The game was a fast-moving one with both sides in to win. Freshmen and Juniors were there rooting for the Devils and the Sophomores and Seniors for the Goats. At the end of the first quarter the Devils were ahead with a score of 4-3. With the second quarter the Goats slowly gained a lead of 12-7 at the end of the first half.

Between halves the Fencing Club staged several exciting matches thoroughly enjoyed by everyone. The whole Devil-Goat Rally was a real representation of the best class spirit.

Saturday (tomorrow night) at 7 o'clock the varsity will play the alumnae in the gym. Tuesday night the final game in the class series will be played between the sophomores and the seniors who are now tied for first place. Before that game the Imps and Warriors will play the last game of the Beginners Basketball Tournament.

The line up for the game last night was as follows:

NOBLESSE OBLIGE

We moved into Washington Hall, and were delighted. The classrooms are charming, and contain just about the most modernistic and artistic appointments one could hope for. The white venetian blinds lend an air of luxury to the surroundings, and the bright, new "chair-desks" climax the whole. And already, though only a few short weeks since the day we first entered our new classrooms, there is a perceptible dinginess about them.

Of course, the floors are partly scared by the scuffling of many feet; the shiny blackboards show signs of quite a lot of use—but those things are to be expected.

But we had supposed that the days of desk carving and besmirching, had, like many a similar fad, "Gone With The Wind." It appears otherwise to our discredit.

A human face is not made any more pleasant looking by the appearance of blemishes on it, is it? Neither is a classroom. And one who has already incurred blemishes upon her face doesn't encourage others, does one?

"Oh dear, I've missed you so much—" and she raised the revolver and tried again.—Exchange

Broad-mindedness is the ability to smile when you suddenly discover that your roommate and your date are both missing from the dance floor.—Carolina Buccaneer.

ODE TO A DUCK

It flew through the air with the greatest of ease,
Carelessly lit near a moocher's knees.

'Twas gazed upon with savage lust,
He paused in reflection, then made a thrust—

His thrust was short by nearly a yard;
I beat him to it, now ain't I a card?

Full many a duck I've been forced to steal,
But darn this fighting for a Chesterfield.

The Melting Pot

Dear Editor:

Let's give three rah's for the student council and their work in the school spirit movement. I would like to give my applause to what I think is the greatest thing being done here at school.

I think that we all would like to look back on college with loyalty and pride and as the loveliest and most colorful days of our life. Surely, if we all become consciously aware of this and really try to cooperate in and take a keen interest in school affairs, Mary Washington will be much dearer to us. I would like to challenge some student to express her ideas as to how this could be brought about in the next issue of the Bullet.

Sincerely,

M.

Dear Editor:

I would like to bring before you something that has been on my mind for sometime. That is—Cheating. Frequently I hear my friends say that they see cheating in class and I have seen evidences myself. Many of us feel the seriousness of this offense and a responsibility for its presence. Is there some way that we could warn those whom we suspect instead of reporting them to the council. Also we feel that sometimes there is no direct proof that a person is being unfair but we feel that they are not quite on the level. Can you help us solve this problem?

Sincerely,

CONCERNED

FAN MAIL FOR MR. WEISS . . .

Dear Editor:

We knew he could act. We knew he could recite, direct, even produce plays and radio programs. But where has he been hiding that voice?

When I heard him over the radio several weeks ago, I was at the same time amazed and overjoyed. And I thought the songs he chose suited his type of voice so well.

Last night in the dining room, I thought his singing superb!

If he ever sings over the radio again (and I do hope he will soon) I would like to request that he sing my favorite, "I Don't Worry, 'Cause It Makes No Difference Now."

sincerely,

A FAN

For Poets Only

RENEWAL OF PAIN

My tears are seeping
As blood from an old wound
That will not heal,
Or has broken open again.
Forgetting too soon in folly
All that was pain to remember,
I glimpsed you once again
Last night, and the wound
Has re-opened,
And is bleeding my tears—warm,
desolate,
And utterly despairing—
For you have forgotten wisely
That which was pain to remember.

CHANT FOR A FOOL

Thrice have I tried
And three times made
A fool of me . . .
But wait! I lied—
We fools weren't made
But born to be.
We stumble on
With babbling tongue
And shining eye
Our soul is gone . . .
Our knell is rung . . .
We will not die
But shrill into Eternity
Our song we call
Futility . . .

School Spirit

(Editor's Note): School spirit is a trite subject, we admit, but since there has been so much discussion of this question of late, we submit this editorial written by one of our students.

School spirit! What is it? We can define it simply by saying, "it is that intangible asset that seems to greet one the minute they step on a campus." It is seen and heard in spite of the fact that no one says, see there, that is "school spirit."

If you want to make our campus one of the best, all we have to do is try putting in practice the things our handbook tells us. Doing the right thing is important. Here on the "Hill" there are certain rules that we must abide by. We all know these rules and if we persistently break them when we know we are breaking a law, certainly we are not helping ourselves nor for that matter are we helping others by setting an example worthy of being followed.

One of the most prominent of the rules that stand out in my mind at present, is that of "breaking study hour." Every girl on the Hill knows that she is doing wrong if she goes into another student's room without permission. Yet, and though you may not believe it, even in our upperclassman dormitories, we find a few who just never have learned the responsibility they have in making this campus one of the best in the country. It has often been said, "Heaven is what you do in the dark." Certainly the girl who knowingly does such a small thing but yet commits such a significant offense as "breaking study hour," is not strengthening her own character, as she should be doing from her college years. She is missing that part of college that should be most important to her, leaving her with a firm foundation of strong character for later life.

By practicing the right way of all things here on the "Hill" she will learn from obeying the rules, a strong sense of good citizenship which will make her a better, more valuable citizen in any community.

Each and everyone here on the "Hill" is a part of the Student body, council, and government. Automatically upon enrollment you accept your responsibility in the student government of this college.

All these you know by heart. Practice them by doing what is right. You'll find that once you start doing the right thing you will have a sense of gratification. A feeling that you know you have done what is right. Everything will seem to have a new and better slant to it, than before.

Why wait? Let's start right now to dig out all the things we shouldn't do. Put in place all the things that should be there and add a little helpfulness to every situation you come in contact with. All, too, a smile and Mary Washington College will be still more proud of its fine campus and finer girls.

What To Look For

By Eloise Brill

Before long the feminine mind will be filled with thoughts of spring finery and gay colors and designs. Some, perhaps, with a taste of spring days already experienced, have in mind just what they have hopes of finding when they start their shopping. These are the fortunate few. Most of the feminine population, however, will start out not knowing what they are looking for, and end up by buying a conglomeration of non-matching attire. Never forget that the key note to a smart wardrobe is its matching ability.

While a window shopping tour of Washington or any large city will disclose the latest models and newest colors, it will help if you already know just the general styles and colors will be favored.

For that indispensable spring suit, the most popular will have wide moulded shoulders, not too narrow sleeves and a snugly fitted waist and will be cut along casual lines veering away from the manish tailored style. Lengths of jackets will vary, extending from one inch below the waist to five inches below. On the longer ones will be found huge, square, patch pockets. The gathered in bustle effect will still be seen in both jacket and dresses, while some will be slit up the back to the waist as a riding coat, or two slits as a military coat. Casual, open neck lines will be most favored. Many Reefer coats will be seen, but the skirt will be full and have no swing. Most of the fullness will be pulled to the back in skirts and the sport ones will have deep, insert pockets with wide banded slits.

Full Skirts Featured

In all dresses the skirts will be full—gathered, gored, and pleated, but with little draping. It took time for women to adopt this full skirt but now they are convinced that a flared skirt flatters a good figure and conceals a faulty one. No more revealing, pencil slim skirts. Wide, wide, shoulders and a wasp waist will be accentuated.

Evening dresses allow for your own personal expression, and will range from the billowery-skirted, wasp-waisted, Southern type containing upward from 25 years of net to the Grecian draped crepe. The double duty dress which can be worn to dinner and then for dancing afterwards, will be the most popular. Jackets for evening dresses will be of the fitted type and also the draped jackets tying in the front will be worn by both young and not quite so young.

Gray, favorite of all neutrals this season, unburies your flair for color in accessory—and with those lovely neutral grays will be seen "Hot Pink," "Misty Green"—which is a frosted aqua, and shades of "Earth Brown." This is the year to wear any and all stripes. Pin stripes are especially popular. Be fashionable, but do not sacrifice becomingness for style. Choose a color and lines that will emphasize your natural good points and conceal your none too good ones.

Dress of the Week—

For an afternoon and date dress which can be worn for any informal occasion, choose one not so extreme in style as to become tiresome. This gray dress of soft jersey, has a set-in girdle of navy to bring out the high bust line. Soft unpressed pleats in the front, lend a slenderizing note. A very little of the scarlet lining of the neckline shows, but this scarlet is repeated in the suade bag and scarlet feather. A gray felt hat and gray suade gloves complete the ensemble.

Asked if he had anything to offer the court before sentence was passed, a convicted man replied in the negative, explaining that his lawyer already had it all.

And Your Name?

'Tis said "a rose by any other name would smell as sweet," but according to the survey made by your columnist with regard to the connotations of various feminine names, the sweetest rose seems to be the one named Ruth, especially of the tall, brunette variety. You'll find them always cooperative and willing, just when they are dressed and ready for the social whirl, they are just "too sweet for words." The Ruths of the small, blond classification, however, are inclined to be too alive, too vivacious, and too much in a hurry to be sweet, but by virtue of their chatter and clatter, society really can't do without them. Furthermore, they don't tell secrets and that is a virtue, if there be any among women.

Now if you want to know whom to trust, watch out for the Margarets and the Dorotheas. Not that they mean to be bad, but they are just so fun-loving and enjoy gossip so much that they will disclose everyone's secrets rather than run out of talk. The Margarets usually turn out to be fine housewives, but still talkative, while the "Dots" are headed for a career of some sort. And speaking of careers—the Helens have it there. Less chatty, more subdued, in their very reticence they are building themselves for a career or a profession. All are fearless, steady and independent; they rarely are beautiful, but they are individual.

Speaking of beauties, the Eleanors and the Jeans seem to be tops in that respect. Both are athletic, and both by virtue of their good builds and beauty can wear clothes with finesse. Among the Elizabeths are the Elizabeths who are scholarly but good friends and the Bettys—clever, smart, and cheerleaders. They always have a string of men wound about their little fingers, and leap year is every year for them.

Your columnist was just a little chagrined at the next findings with regard to the age-long popular name of Catherine, Katherine, or Kathryn. Whatever you spell it, it is still Katharine, but with regard to the personality, there are as many varieties as there are Heinz soups. The Catherine de Greats and the Catherine de Medicis still exist. Some Katharines, so they tell your writer, who really is not an authority with regard to this point, are very scholarly; some turn definitely toward social life and activities, disclosing themselves to be versatile, capable, and shrewd. These types become professional women frequently, and sometimes they too have careers. While the Kath-arines are wont to be temperamental and bossy, the branch called Kays are the "cut," clever, sweet, and lovable ones who have a cheery word for everyone, and a glad smile.

We could not do without our Junes who with all their prettiness and daintiness are wonderful workers just as are the Franceses, perhaps the most conscientious and faithful of all women. In Irene, we often find a tiny, sweet, reticent, but faithful brunette, while the Annes just plain "love life."

Generally speaking the Marys are of a nice category, for they are courteous, conscientious, and usually nice looking. They too are good roommates, and better housekeepers. The Gertrudes? Well, there is an interesting personality—cooperative, skillful, extremely sincere, yet they will keep one guessing. I am duly informed that Gertrudes as a class love fruits and cherries, but though I know of at least one in this group, the writer would be interested to have further corroboration on the subject, as this seems to be a distinguishing trait!

Well, we can hardly pay attention to all the many names of the "fems," but to the tall, attractive Constances goes energy and good cheer; the Marjories have plenty of spirit; the Charlottes are the best of friends; and the Virginias, who live to love, possess gayety, hospitality, and honor!

World Affairs Class Makes Unusual Trip

Mr. Darter's class in World Affairs added another to their already exciting list of "classroom experiences" with an all day trip to Washington Tuesday, February 27.

Leaving Fredericksburg at 9:30 a. m., the party, in a chartered bus, returned late that evening. Chief feature of the trip was a visit to the Supreme Court. After being present at a session of the court, the class was taken on a tour of the building, including the library rooms for use by the justices.

After lunch, the remainder of the afternoon was occupied with a tour of the Pan American Union Building, lead by Mr. Murphy, chief of the division of research, who explained the purpose and functionings of the Pan American Union. Upon the invitation of Dr. Rowe, director of Latin American Relations, the class will attend the eighth Pan American Scientific Conference which will be held there in May.

The members of the class include: Audrey Schreiner, Betty Anne

"Steve" Appeals To Students

"As a whole student body we have no unity," stated Leighton Stevens, president of the student council, at a recent interview.

For the past several weeks a group of girls on the student council have been having meeting in various dormitories to hear the student body's opinion on what we could do to arouse more "school spirit."

"We have a beautiful campus and beautiful buildings, and all it takes now is for us, 1300 girls, to make something out of them," emphasized Steve.

Plans are being made, if dormitories agree, to have competitive pap programs. Basketball games have already been going on between the dorms.

At a meeting held in Frances Willard, Mary Estes, president of the Y. W. C. A., brought out that you won't feel like you belong to this school unless you put something into it. Remember "you only get out of something just what you put into it!"

"We would like to get as many girls out for vespers or any other activity, the whole student body," urged Steve.

Many students wanted to have dormitory sings after study hour.

"Whatever steps are taken to build up 'school spirit' will determine the success of our next school year," concluded the student body president.

Fencing Authority To Be Guest Of MWC Club

The Mary Washington College Fencing Club was featured between the halves of the Devil-Goat basketball game Thursday night when several girls staged a fencing exhibition consisting of a demonstration and several informal bouts. The participants were: Vivian Ale, Madeline Cueti, Margaret Gilman, Virginia Handley, Eleanor Phillips and Dorothy Shaw. Miss Gilman, president of the club, gave a brief discussion of fencing and its history.

Saturday, March 9, the club will play hostess to Mr. Tucker Jones, head of the department of Physical Education at the College of William and Mary. Mr. Jones, accompanied by two assistants and two William and Mary students, will give instruction to the club members and later stage a fencing exhibition which will be open to the student body.

The Fencing Club will conclude its activities for the year on Tuesday, March 11, by holding "open house" in the gym for all who would like to come and try a hand at fencing. Girls will be on hand to give instruction in the elementary rules and etiquette of the game.

Modern Dance Club Convocation Feature

The Modern Dance Club presents its first recital of the year at Convocation on Wednesday, March 6. Science Club Has Annual Banquet

The Gold Room of the Palms Grill was the scene of another delightful banquet Tuesday evening, February 13th, as members and guests of the Matthew Fontaine Maury Science Club gathered there for their annual banquet. Thirty-one were present. The banquet table was decorated with red and white programs and favors emphasizing the valentine theme.

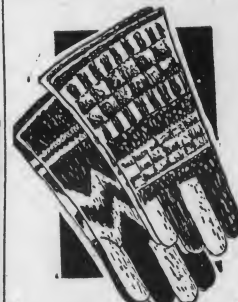

The club was glad to have as its guests Mrs. Alexander and Mrs. Pierce and were sorry that Dr. and Mrs. Morgan L. Combs and Dr. and Mrs. Hugo Itlis were unable to be present.

The program of the evening was very interesting. Miss Virginia E. Lewis, president of the club, extended to all present a cordial welcome. At this time Miss Lewis expressed a desire that the annual formal banquet might become a traditional factor in the club. Dr. Roy S. Cook, a faculty advisor, responded to this welcome.

Dr. Alexander and Dr. Pierce conducted as their contribution to the program of the evening, a quiz program which proved very entertaining. Miss Lewis then made a toast to our faculty advisors to which Dr. Pierce responded.

The remainder of the program was furnished by four initiates of the club, and their contributions of readings and songs were thoroughly enjoyed. Those who were taken into the club at this time were Eleanor Adams, Sarah Briggs, Becky Buckingham and Riley Proffitt.

The Infirmary now has on hand the reports from the X-Ray examinations. Any student may get her X-Ray report by calling at the infirmary.
